Potential Risks and Limitations Of Dental Treatment

As a rule, excellent dental results can be achieved with informed and cooperative patients. Thus, the following information is routinely supplied to anyone considering dental treatment in our office recognizing the benefits of a pleasing smile and healthy teeth, you should also be aware that dental treatment, like any treatment of the body, has some inherent risks and limitations. These risks and limitations usually do not contraindicate treatment but should be considered in making the decision to submit to dental treatment.

Perfection is our goal. However, in dealing with human beings, and problems of growth and development, the ravages of dental disease, genetics and patient cooperation, achieving perfection is not always possible. Often a functionally and esthetically adequate result must be accepted. We will do everything within our capacity to insure the best possible care.

Throughout life teeth are constantly changing. Periodic examinations should be made so any disease can be treated promptly. Frequent professional visits are the best insurance against serious dental disease. Decay or gum disease can occur if patients do not brush and floss their teeth properly and thoroughly. Excellent oral hygiene and plaque removal is a must.

On rare occasions the nerve of a tooth may die and become infected. A tooth that has been damaged by deep decay, a minor blow or extensive dental treatment can die over a long period of time. An undetected non-vital tooth may flare up during any dental treatment, and may require endodontics (root canal) treatment to maintain it. It may even have to be removed. There is also a risk that during or following treatment soreness or tenderness may occur in the temporomandibular joints (lower jaw joints).

The total time for treatment can be delayed beyond our estimate. Treatment plans can change due to altered conditions which may surface during treatment. Decay which may appear small on x-ray, may be larger than anticipated resulting in much more extensive treatment.
